Explanation

Use this format where each chapter of the book has its own author and its own title.

The in-text author is the author of the chapter and not the book editor. Where a textbook (such as Potter and Perry above) has unit editors, and chapters within each unit may or may not have chapter authors: use chapter authors if given; if not use unit editors in place of chapter authors.

Explanation
	Most eReaders can resize pages, which changes the numbering and makes quoting from a book on an eReader tricky. However, the bottom of each page should show both the page number and the total number of pages (sometimes called locations). Use the ratio of these two numbers e.g. (Martin 2003, p. 83/10893) for quotes. Use p. even if the reader uses locations.	When an electronic book is on an eReader, such as Kindle, reference it similarly to a print book (see the Martin example above) with the words 'electronic book' directly after the title. Get the book's citation details from the page after the title page, or by using the 'Copyright' link in the table of contents, or from the site from which you downloaded the book. You don't need to put the place of publication if this is not clear. Do not put a URL or the type of reader.

Windhoek. Foreword by A. Price.

But this is only recommend if you are referencing the text once, with that one reference including a quote from the

Rodin, A. 1886, The lovers, sculpture, Rodin Museum, Paris.

(Olley 2000)

Olley, M. 2000, Proteas in the kitchen, painting, private collection.

Explanation

Note that this applies only to an original artwork. Normally you will be referencing a reproduction, in which case see the previous page.

If the image is your own work, you do not need to reference it, just make it clear in your text that it is yours. If the image is yours but is an image of another person's work, you should reference that work.

Reference List Format:

- > Artist
- > Year [In this example, Year is the year the artwork was created. If you have no date for the work, use n.d. for 'no date' instead of the year. If you only have an approximate date, put c. for 'circa', meaning around) in front of the year: e.g. (Michelangelo n.d.) and (Picasso c. 1893)].
- > Title (in italics)
- > Type of Work (Type of Work is 'artwork', although you can be more specific if you wish, e.g. oil painting, watercolour, sculpture or photograph).
- > Museum or Gallery
- > City (City is the city where the museum or gallery is located. If in a private collection, you do not need to have a City.)

Explanation

Please note that it is recommended that you avoid (if possible) referring to lecture notes. Instead try to locate a published source, i.e. a book or journal article.

See

Referencing a PowerPoint slide, lecture notes or subject documents found on the web (e.g. UTS Online) is similar to referencing a website. So you need to include the date you viewed it, and the URL.

If you are referencing an article or book chapter contained within course material, reference it as the original hard copy article or book chapter, even if the course material is online.

4.11 Previous assignment

Previous assignments should not be referenced, as they have not been published and are therefore impossible for the reader to trace. If you are referring to facts, quotes or data that you have used in a previous assignment, you can simply reuse the appropriate references.

Examples of in text references:

Jones (1989, pers. comm., 6 May) believed that this was not relevant.

This was confirmed by email (Brown 2008, pers. comm., 3 July).

Personal communications can take a number of forms and are not normally available for consultation except under special circumstances. For this reason it is not normally necessary to refer to personal communications in your reference list.

In the text of your document you should specify the year and the date (day and month) when the personal communication took place.

Explanation

Personal communications include emails, letters, phone and in-person conversations, where you personally are the one being communicated with.

Adams, D.E. 1917, 'My journey to Khartoum', in possession of M.A. Adams, Adelaide.

Explanation

A work is unpublished if it was produced in a very limited number of copies and has never been available commercially. The most common examples are theses and unpublished conference papers. Manuscripts and diaries are unpublished works. With these, add details about where the works are located. The main difference with referencing unpublished works is that the main title is not in italics but instead is enclosed in single quotes.

Explanation

Use the ampersand symbol before the last author surname.
If there are 4 or more authors, list the first author and abbreviate with et al.

(Include single quotations marks and page numbers if using a direct quote.)

See

The key elements of a conference paper reference are:

- > Author(s) of the paper
- > Year of publication of the proceedings
If you have no date, use n.d. (for 'no date') instead of the year
- > Title of paper ('in single quotes'),
- > Conference name (in italics)
- > Publisher of the proceedings (normally the organisation responsible for the conference)
- > Place of publication. Include the state or country if there is a chance of confusion (e.g. Perth, WA) or if the place is not well known
- > Page numbers of the paper in the proceedings.

Use this format for a single paper from a conference proceedings. To reference the whole conference proceedings as one work, treat it as an edited book instead. If an online conference paper has an equivalent printed version, reference it as if it was the print version.

Paper Encyclopedia: Lemons are described as 'yellowy soury things that grow on trees' (Wiseman's Encyclopedia 2010, p. 767).

Online Encyclopedia: Oranges are described as 'round tangy things that grow on trees' (Acumen Encyclopedia 2007).

[First example does not appear in the reference list because it's a print dictionary].

Acumen Encyclopedia 2007, Acumen Publishing, viewed 15 November 2012, <<http://www.acumenencyc.com/>>.

Explanation

Dictionaries and Encyclopedias are referenced like a book with no author. If in print (or if online but the same as the print) you only need an in-text reference for a dictionary reference. You don't need to put print dictionaries in your reference list.

If quoting from an encyclopedia, use page numbers if in print; if online use the method for quoting from an online book. You don't need to put page numbers if quoting from a dictionary (because it's obvious where the quote comes from).

For an online-only dictionary or encyclopedia, because you need to include information about the web address, reference like an online book with no author, and include in your reference list. The web address should be the main website address, not the address of the particular entry you looked up (see examples above). As with an online book, if the place of publication is not given you can leave it out.

05 Reference Lists & General Rules

Please Click On What You Would Like To Know:

5.1 An Example of a Reference List

The reference list is sorted alphabetically by author (or title when no author is found).

In order of appearance the first is a website, then a book chapter in an edited book, followed by a book and a journal article.

Barbas-Rhoden, L. 2003, Writing women in Central America: gender and the fictionalization of history, Ohio University Press, viewed 17 June 2010, <<http://site.ebrary.com/lib/utslibrary/Doc?id=10124766>>.

5.2 In Text References & The Reference List

When you cite a reference in the text of your document, use the author surname and the year of publication. This is called an in-text reference. For example:

- > The theory was first propounded in 1970 (Larsen 1971).
- > If there are 4 or more authors, list the first author and abbreviate with et al.
- > If the author name is already in the text immediately in front of the in-text reference, you can use just the year. e.g.: Larsen (1971) was the first to propound the theory.
- > If you have a group of references cited together in the text, they should be ordered alphabetically by first author surname: e.g. (Hawking & Weinberg 2009; Larsen 1971; Smith 1997).
- > If you have no date for a reference, use n.d. (for 'no date') instead of the year. If you only have an approximate date, put c. (for 'circa', meaning around) in front of the year: e.g. (White n.d.) and (Beethoven c. 1813).
- > All in-text references must be included in a single list of full references at the end of your document. The exception to this rule is personal communication
- > This list must be arranged alphabetically by author surname or by title in the absence of an author. It should begin on a new page, and can be either single or double spaced. If single spaced, when a reference is more than one line long the extra lines are indented by a tab space (this is called a 'hanging indent'). The preference for single or double spacing varies across faculties so you should consult your lecturer or faculty assignment writing guide about this.
- > If your author's name has 'Junior' or 'Senior', eg W. Strunk Jr, cite with just the surname in the text, eg: (Strunk & White 1979). In your reference list place Jr or Sr after the final initial of the author's first names, eg: Strunk W. Jr & White E.B. 1979, The elements of style, 3rd edn, Macmillan, New York.

5.3 Referencing Quotations

If you are using a short quote use single quotation marks and your in-text reference must give the page number(s) where the quote comes from. Use p. for a single page or pp. for several pages. For example:

It has been suggested that 'the taxation advantage enjoyed by superannuation funds, relative to private investment in shares, was somewhat neutralised in 1988' (McGrath & Viney 1997, p. 137).

When making a direct quote of more than about thirty words do not use quotation marks but include the quote as a separate paragraph, indented from the text margin and set in smaller type.

We see evidence of this in Ulysses:

Mr Bloom stood far back, his hat in his hand, counting the bared heads. Twelve. I'm thirteen. No. The chap in the macintosh is thirteen. Death's number. Where the deuce did he pop out of? He wasn't in the chapel, that I'll swear. Silly superstition that about thirteen. (Joyce 1992, p. 139)

If you are merely summarising or paraphrasing, rather than directly quoting, then you do not need to give page numbers. However you can if you wish, and it is strongly recommended that you do so if the work you are referencing has a large number of pages.

Continued

5.3 Referencing Quotations

If you are sourcing a quotation from a website, you will not be able to quote a page number, so instead use the paragraph number, abbreviated with the term 'para.'

'A number of revenue initiatives have been released since the Government came to office, with an estimated impact of $8.9 billion over the forward estimates period' (Department of Finance 2009, para. 5).

If the webpage is particularly long and unwieldy, describe the section of the website that contains your quotation in the body of your writing, and then mention the paragraph number in the in-text citation.

In the Summer Collections section of the Fashion Report for 2013, it was predicted that 'red would be the colour for 2014' (Style Daily 2013, para. 16).

5.4 A Quote From A Work Citing Another Author

- Einstein stated in 1906 that 'time is relative' (Thorne 2003, p. 17).
- OR Thorne (2003, p. 17) notes that in 1906 Einstein stated that 'time is relative'.
- OR According to Thorne (2003, p. 17) it was Einstein who stated that 'time is relative' in 1906.
- OR Einstein (1906, cited in Thorne 2003, p.17) stated that 'time is relative'.
- OR 'Time is relative' according to Einstein (Thorne 2003, p. 17).
- OR 'Time is relative' (Einstein, cited in Thorne 2003, p. 17).

Sometimes a work you are using discusses a work from another author. Citing work from another author may occur in PowerPoint slides, lecture notes, books or journal articles. For example, in a book by Thorne, written in 1994, on page 78 you find a reference to a 1906 paper by Albert Einstein. To cite the work by Einstein you should mention Einstein's paper in the text and use Thorne as your in-text reference, with page number.

In your reference list you must have the full reference for Thorne. If you wish, you may also include the reference for Einstein (you can get this from Thorne's bibliography), but this isn't necessary because you haven't actually consulted the Einstein paper directly.

The a, b, c is determined by the alphabetical order of the Titles in the reference list.

Explanation

If you have two references by the same author, but the references were printed in different years, list the references in chronological order in your reference list.

5.7 Corporate authors with very long names

Sometimes the author of a reference can be an organisation with a long name. This makes in-text referencing difficult if you need to reference it often. To deal with this, you may use an abbreviation of the organisation's name, if you wish, as follows.

- When you first mention the organisation in your document you need to make clear what its abbreviation is. For example (there are many ways of doing this, you can use any way that makes it clear): According to the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT 2006) ...
- Thereafter in your document text you can refer to the author using its abbreviated name (in this case, as DFAT), including in any in-text references, eg (DFAT 2007).
- In your reference list, you must list all the references as normal using the full organisational name.
- You also need to put one extra entry into your reference list for the abbreviation, in the appropriate place alphabetically, indicating what the full name is. This entry is of the form: Abbreviation - see Full name.
- Note that the abbreviation's entry does not have a date. Note also that there might be one or more references in your list that come between the full names and the abbreviation.
